The American Flag in Canada

A few Americans when touring in Canada like to deck their cars, and sometimes even their persons, with American flags. And there are Canadians who every now and then lift up their voices in protest against this imagined violation of the sacredness of Canadian territory and atmosphere. It is impossible to sympathize with the type of super-saturated patriotism that objects to a visitor displaying on his own personal property the emblem which he cherishes, which gives him expression and is for him the symbol of his identity. The American wearing his flag offers no slight to the flag that is flown in Canada, and the suggestion that found its way into print the other day urging the prohibition of such display of the American flag unless accompanied by the British flag is utter nonsense. It expresses a spirit of little-mindedness that is provocative of international animosity.

The presence of the American flag-wearing tourists in Canada should be welcomed. Their flags offer no disrespect to our own flag. As a simple method of announcing the presence of a guest it is an invitation to hospitality and courtesy. By attracting attention to themselves in a perfectly harmless way the tourists are intentionally aiding the movement for better understanding between the populations of the two sides of the international boundary.

There is always room for anything that will stimulate friendly relations between Canadians and Americans. The thorny problems that must inevitably present themselves from time to time can be more amicably settled in an atmosphere of goodwill. One serious question agitating the minds of many Canadians is that of the diversion by the City of Chicago of vast volumes of water from the Great Lakes, which is lowering the water level of the Canadian rivers and endangering the development of water power in Canada. Much bitterness is being engendered over the resultant dispute, and truly patriotic Canadians, by localizing a dispute such as this instead of nationalizing it, would help towards reaching a mutually satisfying agreement. We can do much more by setting ourselves out to cultivate a friendly attitude towards Canada in the United States than by stupidly and rudely thrusting our flag at American visitors. The real patriotism in Canada is the expression of a spirit of cordiality towards our guests.

Superstition

Superstition clogs the mind of even the most rational of beings. People change their theology to suit their understanding. They change their observances to suit their convenience, but they cling with unreasoning tenacity to their superstitions. Superstition is a detriment to sincere faith. Its dead hand mortifies the soul. It places false and misleading values upon religion leading to absurd inconsistencies in conduct. The intellectual standard of the community is dangerously lowered in the extent to which superstition holds sway over the present-day Jew. Judaism for a growing number of people seems to consist mainly in a few superstitious inhibitions which survive from another day and which are meaningless and purposeless in modern life. A Judaism that affects only the trivial is a dead Judaism without spirit to inspire and uplift.

The observance of the "Three Weeks" between the Fast of Tammuz and the Fast of Ab is illustrative of this. At one time it had a profound meaning for the Jew. That meaning is now almost entirely lost, because it has failed to keep up with the later experiences of Judaism. It is a survival but without spiritual force, because the living soul which made it what it was became petrified. To-day it is largely a form without any stimulating content, and even of that form very little remains for the vast majority beyond the superstitious clinging to form for form's sake. It is a tyranny of the dead over the living. Yet there is so much that could make it throb with life for this generation as it throbbed with life for the Jews of the Middle Ages.

The two fasts have their origin in the events of the destruction of Jerusalem and the downfall of the Jewish state. On the 9th of Tammuz in the year 586 B.C., Jerusalem was captured by the Babylonians and on the 7th of Ab, four weeks later, the Temple was destroyed and Israel went into exile. These days were commemorated by fasting, reference to which is found in the Book of Zechariah. Six and a half centuries later, in the year 70 C.E., the tragedy was re-enacted. On the 17th of Tammuz the daily sacrifices in the Second Temple were discontinued, as there were no animals left in the besieged city. Three weeks later, on the 9th of Ab, the Temple was destroyed by the Romans and the Jewish people were again exiled from their land. These two classic disasters thus coincided most remarkably in date. The misery of the Jewish people was concentrated in the repeated tragedies of these weeks. Twice they became the starting point of Jewish suffering in exile. Twice they signaled Jewish national failure. But let it be noted that the days of fasting were changed. The Jews of those times did not go on fasting on the 9th of Tammuz and the 7th of Ab. They shifted the dates. They had probably forgotten the two fasts altogether during the existence of the Second Temple, but at all events they changed the dates. Later on they associated some earlier tragical happenings with these dates. It came to be a tradition that the breaking by Moses of the Tables of the Law occurred on the 17th of Tammuz. We are also told that the setting up of an idol in the Temple precincts by a Roman governor took place on the 17th of Tammuz. Bethar, the last stronghold of the Jews in Palestine, is said to have fallen to the troops of Hadrian, in 135 C.E., on the 9th of Ab. The final desolation of Jerusalem, when the plow was drawn over the site of the Temple preparatory to the building of a Roman colony over the ruins, was also on the 9th of Ab. In order to accentuate the sense of national disaster, one of the rabbis created the tradition that it was on the 9th of Ab that the

FOLKS' SCHULE

In connection with the graduation ceremonies of the Folks' Schule, May 9, the annual school magazine, Blende Zweigloch was issued, containing work by the Senior and Junior pupils. A copy of the magazine can be obtained from the principal. A large number of pupils of the Folks' Schule, especially those of School No. 2, are leaving for various summer resorts but the school will remain open until the third week in July. The Schule gives three weeks' vacation only to pupils, to avoid the partial disruption in the school system caused in recent years by absentees. The teachers are working on a system whereby the absentee pupils will be kept in touch with. All the pupils leaving for the country will receive instructions regarding the lesson being done during each week, and of which they will send a written report to the teacher. A recent campaign for the Jewish workers in Palestine has been started by the pupils. In connection with this campaign, the pupils of the Folks' Schule and those of the Peretz School were given a treat Sunday, June 20. The New York committee of the Gewerkschafter campaign sent the film, "The Song of Labour," showing recent development of life in Palestine. It was screened Sunday at 9.45 a.m., at

Conclusion of a confirmation editorial in the Jewish Ledger, "official organ of the joint lodges of Bnai Brith," New Orleans, La., written by Dr. Mendel Silber:

"Many metaphysical phrases and religio-philosophical conceptions constitute the confessions which, provided the children do not get 'stuck' in reciting them, always create a profound impression, chiefly because they are fully as intelligible and comprehensible to the members of congregations as they are to the children of the confirmation classes.

"Is it to be wondered at that Reform Judaism has so thoroughly spiritualized our people?"

Has it? ?

Another echo of confirmation from the Jewish Advocate "dedicated to Americanism and Judaism" in the City of Boston, Mass., Alexander Brin, president and editor:

"We should caution our parents against elaborate festivities and luxurious affairs in honour of their confirmants. To be sure, we Jews have ever honoured learning with due ceremony and reverence, but to arrange gorgeous parties and lavish hotel dinners in honour of the young confirmant, as is the practice, in some circles, is poor taste and misses the mark in appreciation of the real essence of the admirable institution of confirmation. Better give the money to charity, to the synagogue, to Palestine, in the name of the new confirmant. This will be a much more desirable manner of honouring the son or daughter confirmed and of truly glorifying the name of God.

"Now we wish to point to an ungenerous and unfair custom practiced by some calculating parents. While they have a son or daughter who is to be confirmed they will become attached to some temple or synagogue. But no sooner are they confirmed when they find they no longer have any use for the house of worship and cockily send in their resignation. They are through with the spiritual centre and cut themselves off from its influence, for their economy begins in their spiritual affiliations."

What price spiritualization? ?

* * *

One of the South African papers writes hotly that "disrespect to Jewish sentiment and Jewish tradition was recently shown by the Yeoville Jewish Literary and Social Society in arranging a tennis luncheon where 'trefah' meats were provided which caused strict observers of the Jewish dietary laws unwittingly to participate. It is a bad state of affairs when an institution which is called Jewish is ready to sacrifice the principles for which it stands for the sake of a little inconvenience."

The above might have come from a Canadian Jewish paper or from one in Shanghai, China, or Los Angeles, California. It is a dull week, indeed, when some defection from Orthodox Judaism does not cause a rumpus among the strict observers. It goes on, as an old Christian hymn says,

"From Greenland's icy mountains
To India's coral strands."

And the offenders, don't forget, are always apparently "orthodox" or at least Jews. Gentiles would never attempt to feed Jews against the Jews' consciences. They usually have more sense and better taste.

The House of Representatives of the United States has passed a very harsh Deportation Bill under suspension of the rules whereby amendments are prohibited and debate limited to forty minutes. This Bill, now referred to the Senate, goes beyond all previous legislation and all moderation.

At present any alien who is sentenced to jail for a year or more for a crime involving moral turpitude, is deportable. Under the new act the number of offences considered as bearing moral turpitude are increased and an alien may be deported, for example, for bearing concealed weapons. An alien whose cumulative jail sentences, when convicted several times, amount to eighteen months or more is deportable under the new Act, so that a man who happened to be sentenced three times for a period of six months each for comparative slight offences could be deported. Any alien is deportable who smuggles any other alien into the States, conceals or harbours any alien or abets any other person to conceal or harbour any alien. Any time after illegal entry an alien who is employed by, in or in connection with a dance hall or place of amusement where prostitutes gather is deportable. And on and on.

To have framed the Holaday Immigration Bill more than one ingenious person, shamelessly hostile to foreigners, must have spent sleepless nights. If it becomes a law the aliens will have to be many times more careful than people the Lord put in the States before them. Those who got in before July 1, 1924, will own the world, the others will go to make up the scourge of undesirables, and the door will be wide open to many new injustices, if open to nothing else. f.f.c.

Social Life in 1902— Do You Remember?—

Israel Myers, of Toronto, was in Montreal visiting his sons, S. P. and A. W. Myers. J. Mona Lesser, born in Montreal, died in Boston at the age of forty-nine, after slipping on the steps of the court house whence, as a lawyer, he was coming from pleading a case. Rabbi Bernard M. Kaplan left McGill College Avenue Synagogue after a difference with some of the members, and accepted a call from the Reform Temple, Bnai Israel, at Sacramento, Cal. Temple Emanu-El Sisterhood was organized with the following officers: president, Mrs. S. Schwarsenski; vice-president, Mrs. S. L. Goldstein; treasurer, Mrs. S. Abrahams. Executive Mesdames B. A. Boas, E. Lichtenhein, Louis Lewis, S. Silverman and B. Goldstein. Assisting the Sisterhood at a ball were: Mark Workman, Chairman; L. Workman, George Goldstein. Born, in Toronto, a son, to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Levi. The engagement was announced of Miss Lillian Vineberg, of Sherbrooke, Que., to S. Fels; of Miss Frances Backrack, of Toronto, to H. Vineberg, of New York; of Miss Carrie Samuel, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harris Samuel, to N. Rosen, of Virden, Man.; of Miss Stephanie Lewis, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Lewis, to Jacob A. Jacobs. The wedding took place at the Place Viger Hotel of Miss Etta Roman, daughter of Samuel Roman, Bishop Street, to Adam W. Klopot, of Boston. The ceremony was performed in the drawing room which was decorated with palms and white carnations. An orchestra played. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore white crepe de chine with yoke of duchess lace. Her veil of the same lace was fastened with orange blossoms and a diamond sunburst, the gift of the bridegroom. Her flowers were roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Mrs. Mendles, sister of the bride was matron of honour. Five little bridesmaids were: Amy and Berenice Mendles, of Perth, Ont., Ruth Levine, Tena Jacobs and Edna Lagowitz. They wore white mousseline de soie frocks over white taffeta and big picture hats. The pages in white satin suits, were: Freddie Mendles, of Perth, Ont., and Frank Redlich, nephews of the bride. All the children carried wands wound with white ribbon and lilies-of-the-valley. A dinner of eighty covers was served. Mr. and Mrs. Klopot left for Eastern cities and to live in Boston, the bride travelling in a blue camel's hair tailored costume, grey feather boa and blue and white hat.

"Those pesky wash days"

need bother you no longer. There is nothing to be gained by doing "family wash" at home nowadays. This laundry, designed—not adapted—for just that work and none other, will do it as quickly and more cheaply than you can do it at home and the work will please even the most picky of washday cranks. We offer you a choice of five different services, including the new super-speed "24-hour wash." Just phone and we will shoulder your troubles.

Why not have a heatless meal?

HOT days, when it seems impossible to think what to serve, here is the easiest—and best—way:

Serve everything cold—and with plenty of cracked ice around any foods where it can be used for garnishing.

The very sight of the ice will make you feel cooler.

You can serve one of the many desserts so easily frozen by packing in cracked ice and rock salt.

There can be no substitute for the many services of clear, sparkling ice. Yet it costs so little you can use all you wish.

At Lakeside House, Jackson's Point, the wedding took place of Yetta, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Alspector and Julius Kestenberg, son of Mrs.
Kestenberg and the late Mr. Kestenberg. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dorakind. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore white flat crepe trimmed with rhinestones and old lace. Her veil fell from a coronet of lace caught with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Mary Alspector, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid in flesh shade flowered chiffon, and carried Columbia roses. Joseph Alspector, brother of the bride, assisted as best man. A reception was held in the large dining hall. Orchestra for dancing. The couple left for a short honeymoon trip and will return to Jackson's Point for the summer.

Jewish Philanthropies Hold Election of Officers

At the regular meeting of the Federation of the Jewish Philanthropies at the Primrose Club the following officers were elected: honorary president, Edmund Scheuer; president, Harry Rotenberg; first vice-president, Eli Pullan; second vice-president, William Leibel; third vice-president, Hyman Smith; fourth vice-president, Joseph Schwartz; honorary secretary, Abraham Cohen; treasurer, Charles Draining; honorary member of the board of trustees, Abraham A. Rhinewein.

Three thousand seven hundred dollars was voted for the Jewish Boys' Camp for this summer. It was estimated that some 420 boys would be accommodated for a two-weeks' outing. The board of trustees also voted $1,000 for the Girls' Fresh Air Camp at Whitby, which is operated by the Junior Council of Jewish Women. Receipts of the Federation for the first five months of the fiscal year were over $45,000.

Snapshots of Jewish Types

I—JOHN, JONAH.

His family was of the extreme Polish assimilationist class. They called themselves "Poles of the Mosaic Confession," and everything really Jewish was taboo. Polish culture was the supreme expression of the human spirit. All Jews who lived a distinctly Jewish life were by them regarded as the "dark masses" with whom all relations must be avoided.

For generations the Jewish name had been stamped out as well as the Jewish consciousness. Their pedigree of "Pure Poland" receded into the dim past, but this pedigree we shall not stop to trace now. We shall now present only one member of the family. We will introduce John, Pan John. That was his name in Poland. But we met him in Palestine. In Palestine? What is Pan John doing in Palestine?

Well, there he is and his story follows. John walked in the footsteps of his father and grandfather. He knew nothing about Jews, absolutely nothing. One thing alone he knew: that on Yom Kippur he must get into his automobile, visit the Tlomatzk Synagogue in Warsaw, listen to the preacher's Polish sermon, and then betake himself to the Bristol Hotel for a sumptuous meal.

But, along comes Satan and inflicts upon the world the Great War. Business is ruined. The atmosphere of Warsaw becomes electric and dangerous. Pan John thinks it over and buys himself a retreat not far from Grodzisk. There he hopes to live in peace and security.

But the Polish peasants are not content. A Polish squire, you see, is more or less tolerable, but a Jew! And so Pan John is serenaded with catcalls and given no other name but Jonah. The catcalls degenerate into more disagreeable tactics and he is told "to go to Palestine."

Was such a thing ever heard of? He, the Polish Pan John, is told to go to Palestine and his name has become Jonah! But—something creeps stealthily into his mind. Generations of Polish culture; not a gleam of Jewish feeling—and yet out of all the masks the Jewish lineaments stare out.

He begins to reflect. It does seem queer, but is he really Jonah and is John a lie, a fraud? Otherwise, how do the peasants know that he is Jonah?

He is afraid to show himself outdoors so he stays home and paces up and down his large rooms, thinking and thinking. Until—one fine day he leaves everything behind, and sets out—for Palestine.

Now he bends over, spade in hand, and digs the earth of Palestine together with other Jewish labourers. And you should hear his Hebrew! He speaks little, always engrossed in his work, but if someone should by way of jest, call him Pan John, he jumps up and cries: "Jonah, Jonah, Jonah!"

II—A "MOUJIK" GRANDFATHER —A CHALUZ GRANDSON

He, the grandson, remembers how his grandfather used to rail at his father. And why did he rail at him? The father was a member of the "Narodovoltzes" whose slogan was: "Go to the People!" That meant, mix with the common people, with the moujiks, and in that way educate them and implant in their minds revolutionary ideas.

His grandfather was opposed. He did not want his son to roam about in Russian villages among the peasants. "What have you to do with the peasants? What have they in common with you, with all of us? Aren't there enough Russians to worry about their peasants?"

But the enthusiastic "Populist" would hear of nothing. He wandered about among the villages unmindful of physical hardships. He kept it up until he fell into the hands of the police. And those who betrayed him were the Moujiks of a village in the Government of Poltava. The mere fact that the uplifter was a Jew inspired them with distrust and suspicion. They saw in him an enemy of the "Orthodox Faith" and reported him to the police. And when he was being led to jail the peasants escorted him with abuse and blows.

But the "Populist" remained true to his convictions. He brought up his children as "Real Russians," nurtured them in Russian culture with the idea that they would "go down to the people."

And one day our present hero, he of the third generation, slung his travelling kit over his shoulder. His old father asked him with surprise: "Whither are you going, my son?"

"To the people!" his son replied. "To the people? What people?" the father asked.

"To the Jewish people—to Palestine!" was the son's answer. "You, father, brought me up with the idea of going to the people and now I am carrying out your idea."

In the Valley of Jezreel this pioneer, the son of the old Russian "Populist," is one of the most zealous tillers of the soil.

III—THE CEDARS OF LEBANON.

The full moon rides over the sky of Palestine, a sky studded with stars, numerous and brilliant as can be seen only in the sky of Palestine. The night whispers a host of secrets; it is as though the past, present and future were being woven together.

My friend and I walk in silence, occupied each with his own thoughts. Suddenly we hear notes of a violin, thin and trembling. It is difficult to say whence they come, from the skies above or the valleys below, or, perhaps, from the Jordan, shimmering in the distance.

Suddenly my friend wakes up as if from sleep.

"Do you know who it is that is playing?" he asks me.

And he tells me the following:

"The player has been in the country two years. He was brought up in a Russian family of rich peasants who adopted him when his parents died. There were no others to receive him. He was then ten years old and the Russians were attracted by the child's cleverness with the violin. Of his own people, the Jews, he knew nothing at all.

"But one day he was reading the life of Anton Rubinstein, the famous Russian-Jewish pianist and composer. The following episode in the life of Rubinstein made a particular impression on him: Rubinstein was once invited to the Court of the Czar. At that time he had

Growth of Boy Welfare Work

Jewish boys' work during the last three years has grown so much that it is divided into three separate activities, the Jewish Big Brothers, Jewish Boys' Club and Jewish Boys' Camp.

The Big Brother Movement, organized twelve years ago, has as one of its main objects, the task of assisting the unfortunate boy who, because of his poor home environment and training, bad companionship, and poor recreational facilities, finds himself in the Juvenile Court as an offender of the law. From this has developed preventive work with the boy who has not appeared in Court, but becomes a problem in the home, school or club.

The Jewish Boys' Club acts as the agency in combating the problem of bad companionship and poor recreation. By placing a boy in one of these groups, his problem becomes minimized to such an extent that there remains very little to be done excepting occasional supervision. In this group, the boy's leader is really his Big Brother, who can watch him act when with his gang, thus knowing what treatment, if any, to administer.

There remain the physically handicapped boy, the incorrigible boy and the mentally defective who receive individual attention.

Eight boys were committed to Mimico during the past year. Three of these boys were re-committed because they broke their parole, and two others were mental cases and had to be confined to Mimico as there was no vacancy at the mental hospital. Through the efforts of the Boys' Club, twelve boys were paroled from Mimico and three young men from the penal institutions, who are now carrying on as law-abiding citizens.

The Boys' Club, of which Harold Levi is president, was organized in 1923 with the main object in view of reducing delinquency. The groups are self-governing under trained leaders. Parliamentary procedure is taught and practiced. A Jewish ritual has been adopted, both for opening meetings and the initiation of new members. Debates, discussions, plays, hikes, athletics, calisthenics and group games formed the chief features.

At present there are thirty self-governing groups at both branches with a total membership of 560 boys. The facilities of the club offer privileges to 192 other boys, who, for various reasons, are unable to belong to groups. The Bnai Brith Library is open four evenings and Sunday afternoon of each week with an attendance of sixty-five boys per night, a circulation of 148 books per week and a membership of 419 boys. The game room offers recreation to ninety-five boys per night who would otherwise roam the streets. In the fall and spring the yard at the central building on Simcoe Street supplements the game room, where the boys participate in outdoor games and organized play. During the year, 2,576 boys utilized the showers in the central building. The billiard room was patronized to the extent of eighty boys per night. Group games are held every night for thirty boys. A parliament of thirty-two boys was instituted directing, as far as possible, boy activities and enabling the club management to get the boy's point of view. The physical work of the club was enlarged. Physical training classes were held two nights a week with 150 boys in attendance. Five teams were entered in the Y.M.C.A. basketball league. Through the kindness of the city, the municipal baths were procured where fifty boys were given swimming instruction one night each week. An innovation at the club was the tumbling and pyramid squad, trained by one of the leaders. During the summer a baseball league was organized with a house league of fourteen teams, a midget and junior team in the boys' Tely league and three teams in the Y.M.C.A. community league. The total attendance for the year was 64,500 boys.

The Jewish Boys' Camp was founded seven years ago by the Bnai Brith, and was supported the past two summers almost entirely by Federation. Over 438 boys were accommodated during the eight weeks of camp in 1925; the majority of these remained two weeks. Only in special cases were a few boys held over for four, six or eight weeks. The majority of these boys sent to camp were from Federation relief families, underprivileged homes and families on the poverty border line.

The menu was strictly vegetarian with no meat, coffee or tea. Instead, fish, fresh fruit, raisins, whole wheat bread and milk comprised the food. The average gain per boy per two weeks was four to six pounds.

The programme consisted of games, hikes, morning instruction classes in bible study, first aid, nature study and swimming.

Friday evening and Saturday morning services including lighting of candles and "kiddish" were held. These services were followed by a bible reading and sermon.

Maternity Aid Society

The Maternity Ladies' Aid, now in existence for over nineteen years, gives special care and attention to expectant mothers and infants, and is maintaining the Mothers' and Babies' Rest Home at Bronte. It also maintains a cot at Queen Mary Hospital by special subscription. It gives supplementary assistance to expectant mothers whenever necessary, encourages the mother to go to the hospital for her confinement and, where necessary, employs a house-keeper to care for the family during her absence. The organization furnishes a complete layette for both mother and baby, and supplies milk, chicken, groceries, etc., before and after confinement.

Many requests for milk to under-nourished children are reported by the school district nurse. Five thousand six hundred and eighty-three quarts of milk have been supplied this year and forty-three maternity cases looked after. Forty-five layettes were supplied. Eye-glasses were given to eighteen children. Two hundred and fifty-four Pesach baskets were given to needy families. Of the children who are now in foster homes, two have both parents in the asylum, another has a mother at Weston Sanitarium, and in the case of the fourth, the mother is dead and the father is at the asylum. In another case the mother died at child-birth and the baby boy was adopted by a Jewish family. Eight babies have been boarded out this year.

The Mothers' and Babies' Rest Home at Bronte takes the mother and children under eight for a two-weeks' stay. The Rest Home is conducted under strict Jewish dietary laws with a Jewish trained nurse in charge. Last year it accommodated eighty-nine mothers and 185 children, each receiving a two-weeks' holiday. This is the fifth year of the Rest Home activities which have been financed independently of Federation, the money being received from an annual bazaar, a grant from the Fresh Air Fund and individual contributions. For 1925 an additional cottage was rented accommodating about thirty mothers and fifty-three children more, at an increased cost of $1,000 the total cost of maintaining the cottages being $4,100.

The society is affiliated with the Home and School Council, Council of Jewish Women, Downtown Neighbourhood Workers' Association, and the Child Welfare Council. Through the grant of $200 a month from Federation, private donations and a membership fee, the work is carried on by women who give their time voluntarily.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, mineral, water power, fish, game and scenery, are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

For free copies write: H. A. MACDONELL, Director of Colonization, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ontario.

Rabbi Samuel's Editorials

Israelites in the wilderness had refused to enter the promised land, and were therefore condemned to wander for forty years. One need not quarrel with such an idea, even though it be far-fetched.

Following the break-up of the national life, the Jews were condemned to a veritable hell of persecution. Their total annihilation became the definite policy of the dominant peoples. Their lot was wretched beyond description. The depicted tortures of the damned in hell were no worse than the mental and physical tortures inflicted upon the Jews. Wholesale massacre of communities by Moslem and Crusader, the lash and the rack and the stake, the burning of the books of Jewish lore, the denial of citizen rights, the arbitrary imprisonments of scholars and leaders, the theft of property, all these form a continuous history right through the centuries. And through it all Judaism remained a living force. Judaism developed and became enriched. Its laws were interpreted, applied and codified. Its customs were adaptable to circumstances. We see this very clearly in the repeated additions to the prayer book and to the continual introduction of ritual and ceremony that expressed the current experiences. The Kinnos, the Selichos and Piyutim for the Fast of Tammuz, for the Fast of Ab and for the intervening sabbaths, are full of reference to the events of the day.

It is now a long time since the last of these Kinnos, etc., was added to the prayer book. Much has happened during those intervening centuries that has excelled the pangs of those earlier misfortunes. Jewish blood and tears have flowed as copiously in the latter days as in the former days. The anguish of martyrdoms, the ruin of repeated expulsions, the degradations of ruthless persecutions have all added their sad tale to the record of Jewish suffering. But the prayer book has been unresponsive to it all, and it is a serious indictment against those who maintain a prayer book that has ceased to be the fountain of life it once was and was intended to be. Why have none of these more recent events found any echo in the orthodox prayer-book? Has Judaism itself placed the Jewish soul in golus? What is the reason other than the tyranny of superstition?

It is this that makes the present observance of the "Three Weeks" and particularly of Tisba Be-ab, hollow and unreal. Recent Jewish experience has made the occurrences of ancient days of lesser interest. Especially has the new opportunity in Palestine turned our gaze forward instead of backward, and we refuse to be enslaved to the dead memories of the distant past. We would not forget the past altogether. It has too many precious messages for us. But one has only to see the ridiculously meagre response to what is living made by those who make a fetish of the past.

Very few Jews keep either of the fasts in these days. That is not wrong, for we live in a time for doing and not for moping. Fewer still pay any attention to the old-fashioned restrictions of the weeks. They do not abstain from pleasures. They do not abstain from meat. They do not go to their synagogues. That again is not wrong, for such things do not help religion to any real extent. But one superstition clings, the superstition of avoiding weddings. That is merely superstition. It has no value. It does no good. In fact it does real harm for it deludes people into thinking that the chief service Judaism demands is the clinging to superstition. One should not quarrel with those who still rigidly maintain the complete observances of the three weeks, however one may disagree with them and decline to follow them, but one should quarrel with those who have discarded everything except a few silly superstitions. They have lost the past and are killing the future. How people who pretend to be rational and modern can still fall for superstition is a psychological mystery. But there it is. The real values of Judaism are being lost and the superstitions are being preserved with religious fervour. We may well add to the national tragedies of which the three weeks are the traditional anniversaries, the greatest tragedy of all, the destruction of the Jewish soul by superstition.

MARRIAGE

Weinstein—Blitt

The marriage of Minnie Fannie, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Blitt, to Jack O. Weinstein, only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. N. Weinstein, took place Wednesday evening at Masonic Hall. The hall was decorated with potted palms and ferns forming an aisle, caught with white ribbons. Rev. J. Berger, of Montreal, officiated. The wedding march was played by an orchestra, under the leadership of H. Goldstein. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a white georgette gown over crepe satin with insets of Chantilly lace, long sleeves, long train of satin edged with chantilly lace, falling from the shoulders. Her veil of tulle fell from a coronet of lace, caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. She was attended by Mrs. Joe Messing, of Philadelphia, matron of honour, wearing a yellow beaded georgette gown, and carrying pink carnations; Miss Minnie Blitt, of Montreal, cousin of the bride; and Miss Ida Budman, of Montreal. The former, wearing a blue taffeta dress circular skirt, and the latter in apricot taffeta, were bridesmaids. They carried bouquets of pink carnations. Jack Steinberg was best man, and the ushers were Isadore Shrier and Ben Blitt, of Montreal. The flower-girl was Sadie Foreman, in a pink crepe de chene frock carrying a basket of small pink roses which were strewn in the path of the bride. The page boy was Nathie Sahrenson, of New York, in black satin suit carrying the ring on a white satin cushion, trimmed with white ribbon and orange blossoms. The train-bearer was Sybil Rosen, of Montreal, in white georgette ruffled frock. The gifts to the matron of honour and bridesmaids were white gold bar pins; to the best man, gold cuff links; to the ushers, silver cigarette cases; to the flower-girl and train bearer, white gold bracelets, and to the page boy, gold ring. Mrs. Joseph Blitt, mother of the bride, wore a grey crepe romaine gown with insets of silver and blue medallions, grey hat to match and corsage bouquet of red roses. Mrs. N. Blitt, of Philadelphia, grandmother of the bride, in black satin. Mrs. Rose Wargelt, of Newark, N.J., aunt of the groom, in black satin. Mrs. S. Ludman, of Providence, R.I., in apple green beaded gown, all wore corsage bouquet of red roses. Dinner was later served to over 100 guests, the table being decorated with the bridal cake, cut flowers and two tall candlebras with pink candles and white ribbons.

Mr. and Mrs. Weinstein left for their honeymoon to points in the United States, the bride travelling in a grey flat crepe, two-piece dress, black silk coat with grey squirrel collar, small grey silk hat, grey shoes and stockings. They will live in Sherbrooke.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. H. Gottlieb, Rosenhayn, N.J.; Mr. and Mrs. J. Sahrenson, Mrs. Fineberg, Mrs. I. Rosenbloom, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. S. Ludman, B. Ludman, Mrs. M. The head office of the Keren Hayesod in Jerusalem has awarded the prizes to the winners in its recent contest among the Hebrew writers and artists for stories and pictures illustrative of the significance of the Keren Hayesod as the main financial instrument of the Zionist Organization. The judge decided not to award the first prize to both the artistic and literary competitions. The second prizes were awarded to Mr. Saponikof, Jerusalem, for his design, "A Boy Sowing," and to K. Silman, Jerusalem, for his story, "Chesed Webech." The third prizes were awarded to Mr. Gur Aryeh, for his design, "Boy with Lamb," and to Mr. Tamir, Jerusalem, for a sketch from the life of a Yemadite child.
